MESSAGE

It gives me immense pleasure to know that Foreign Service Institute (FSI), Ministry of External Affairs of India is launching a quarterly Newsletter Videsh Sewa. I congratulate FSI for the commendable efforts done to show this the light of the day.

FSI, which is an integral part of MEA, has trained new entrants to the Indian Foreign Service (IFS) for more than three decades. Over the years, the mandate of FSI has become more widespread. Every member of the MEA family gets trained at FSI at some point of her/his career. FSI also trains personnel from other government departments who are posted to Indian Missions/Posts.

FSI plays an important role in the development partnership programme of MEA and furthering South-South Cooperation. More than 2500 diplomats from 180 countries have undergone training in FSI. This number continues to rise rapidly. FSI's recent initiative to have an online alumni portal for foreign diplomats trained at FSI is in the spirit of Vasudhaiva Kutumbakam - 'the world is one family'.

I am delighted to see the diversity in training programmes imparted at FSI. I see that there is perfect blend of theory and practice in the training pedagogy used by the Institute. I have no doubt that FSI is playing a remarkable role in chiseling the skills of Indian as well as foreign diplomats and preparing them for their mission.

The Newsletter is an excellent initiative to provide an overview of activities and training programmes being conducted at FSI. It reflects the Institute's commitment towards sharing its expertise. Videsh Sewa is the beginning of a new chapter in the history of FSI.

I wish the FSI team all success.

Dean, Foreign Service Institute
Ministry of External Affairs

Foreign Service Institute (FSI) of the Ministry of External Affairs has made great strides during the more than three decades of its existence since 1986. It is today the premier institution in the country for training of diplomats, both Indian and foreign. The number of training courses conducted, methodology/pedagogy of training, etc. have evolved over time with numerous innovations to meet the diplomatic challenges of the 21st century. The focus today is on intensive courses imparting essential knowledge and diplomatic skills.

FSI training courses for Indian diplomats cover the entire range from newly-inducted Indian Foreign Service (IFS) Officer Trainees to three levels of Mid-Career Training Programmes (MCTPs) to first-time Heads of Missions. In fact, everyone in Missions abroad from Defence Attaches to Cultural Centre Heads to Commercial Representatives and right down to non-representational grade personnel of the Ministry do a stint in FSI.

In parallel, FSI's training vertical for foreign diplomats has gained salience in recent years from the flagship biannual Professional Course for Foreign Diplomats (PCFDs) to annual modules in regional frameworks to special thematic training courses to tailor-made, country-specific programmes. This outreach is buttressed by 80 MoUs signed by FSI with counterpart foreign institutions. Amidst all this, there was a much felt need for the foreign alumni numbering over 2500 diplomats from 180 countries to remain in touch with FSI. This was addressed last year when the External Affairs Minister of India launched the alumni network for foreign diplomats which has since been rolled out and is fully operational.

Another long-standing gap in the rapidly expanding scope of FSI activities has been the absence of a Newsletter. I am extremely happy that FSI is now launching the first edition of its quarterly Newsletter 'Videsh Sewa'. The first edition focuses on capturing and showcasing FSI's numerous programmes and activities during 2018-19. The e-version of the Newsletter will be disseminated via the newly-started alumni portal as outreach to our foreign diplomat friends.

I would like to compliment all concerned in FSI and particularly members of the Editorial Board for this endeavour. The Newsletter is yet another step in FSI's quest to become a state-of-the-art centre of excellence for diplomatic training in India and beyond.
